

Accessibility of government services is ensured from pre-employment to return and reintegration.

Kee hotlines for distressed OFWs open and accessible 24/7

Undocumented workers are served, including in case of emergencies or violations of their rights

Bilateral agreements ensure fair and equal treatment in countries of destination

Legal services are accessible to OFWs and their families at home and abroad

Country-specific contracts guarantee living wages and meet global labor standards

Migrant Workers Resource Centers (MWRCs) are institutionalized.

Vetting of foreign employers enhanced and their appreciation of human and labor rights increased

Digital tools enable safe and easy access to information and services.

No recruitment fees are charged to OFWs

Women OFWs enjoy increased job opportunities, beyond domestic and care work

Engage communities in reintegrating returning OFWs

OFWs are represented in discussions and decisions on issues involving them.

An ABC of a successful labor migration journey

Families are essential partners in enabling a successful migration journey

Psychosocial services are readily available for OFWs and their families and could be accessed without stigma

Xpand reintegration options and services for returning OFWs

LGBTQ+

Gender-responsive migration policies and programs are the norm

Question gendered division of labor, including jobs for OFWs

Health insurance is available and easily accessible to all

Rights-based education and training are provided to OFWs and their families

Social insurance and other social protection services are made portable

Youth are educated about their rights, safe migration, and labor migration issues

Intersecting vulnerabilities of OFWs, such as age and disability, are accounted for

SSS

Training to upgrade and update skills is provided to ensure OFWs are job-ready

Zero tolerance against gender-based violence (GBV) and human trafficking

